

Realty Tech Talk Series

Manage Life's Most Important Paperwork with Docady

This article has been provided by Rajeev Sajja

Have you ever wondered if there was a better system for all of your personal documents? Most people have a folder at home with these documents that will not survive fire or other unplanned life events. Enter, Docady, an easy to use mobile app that helps you manage all your life's most important documents.

Although it may seem risky to have a centralized online location where you store all of your sensitive files, using Docady makes keeping track of those documents much more manageable. I have been using the app for some time now, and there are strong security features built into the app that gave me a level of comfort to continue using it. The app also has intuitive features that help you regulate your information, such as reminders when you need to renew your passport or driver's license etc. You can also connect any of the popular cloud storage services (Dropbox etc.) so it can search for important documents and get your approval to store in Docady (a pretty nice feature).

When I bought my home, it would have been great if my REALTOR® suggested an app like this to simplify my life (of course with all the standard disclaimers!). There are certainly some security questions the app raises, but the need for a service like this is undeniable, and Docady does a good job of it. Stay calm; stay collected with Docady!

Watch this short video that talks about Docady's features.